This History is part of the Second World War Memorial of the East Lancashire Regiment. Every battle recorded in this History is described by one who took part in it; what the narrative thereby loses in continuity of style and treatment we believe it will gain in truth and vividness. Not all the deeds of individual gallantry can be fully recorded in a book of this size; the details of many more will never be known. In these pages we do not glorify war. We record the fear and the courage; the savagery and the compassion; the numbing noise and terrifying silence; disaster and success; hardship to the limit of human endurance, and the never failing determination to overcome all difficulties; and always, between the lines, may be seen the unifying and sustaining influence of the spirit of the Regiment. "Spectamur Agendo"—and may this record of our deeds be a fitting tribute to those who served with us, and who did not return.
