Michael's Story (The Florida Irish) (Volume 5) Suzanne D Williams

Michael stopped cold. He caught eyes with Gerritt and reversed. They had to go home, away from this place, back to the warmth and safety of walls built by love, not hate. Hate had never done his dad any good, and hate had led him to this.

Michael O'Fallen, son of the Man with the Golden Voice, has always been told by others that his singing was better than his father's. Yet so far in his young life, his father hasn't acknowledged it.

His love life, too, seems to be falling short. Jenny Finnegan, who he's loved for years, won't give him the time of day.

Then an offer comes to perform in a series of concerts across the nation, and he knows it's his time for greatness. But rash actions done in the dead of night have far-reaching consequences that, when seen in the light, might destroy the very man who's given him the most - his father.
