The Silver Bridge: The Classic Mothman Tale Gray Barker

Written in 1970 by West Virginia ufologist Gray Barker, "The Silver Bridge" was the first book ever written on the mysterious Mothman creature, and is still one of the best.

Barker was the first researcher on the scene of both the Flatwoods Monster and Mothman cases. Known for his eloquent writing style, Barker became nationally famous for his seminal book "They Knew Too Much About Flying Saucers," which set the standard for reportage of the infamous Men In Black.

In "The Silver Bridge," Barker deftly explores the murky psychological depths of life in the Ohio Valley and West Virginia during the Mothman era of the late 1960s. At times, Barker even "gets into Mothman's head" and attempts to apprise us of the creature's thoughts!

This book was originally printed in small quantities, and hence became very rare, fetching enormous prices. Now, for the first time, it has been made widely available to the general public.

Inside, one finds many intriguing details about Mothman that previously escaped attention. This 2008 edition features new introductions by noted paranormal researchers Allen Greenfield, James Moseley, and Andy Colvin, and is a must-have for any paranormal researcher, cryptozoologist, or ufologist.
