This lesson on Hepatitis includes a complete training packet. Each in-service packet takes approximately one hour to complete and fully meets the Medicare in-service training requirements. As aides need training, you can make as many copies as you want - there s no restriction when used with aides assigned from your office location. Remember that Home Health Aides must have 12 hours of in-service training every year. LESSON OBJECTIVES Upon completion of this program, the home health aide will be able to: Name two early symptoms of hepatitis B infection Define hepatitis as inflammation of the liver Recognize that standard precautions are essential for preventing transmission of the hepatitis viruses in the workplace, and Note that many people infected with hepatitis B virus or hepatitis C virus are unaware of the infection. OVERVIEW Despite development of vaccinations for hepatitis A and hepatitis B, the incidence of the three major types of viral hepatitis in the United States is widespread. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) estimates that the number of deaths from hepatitis C alone will triple in the next two decades. Hepatitis B is responsible for more than 6,000 deaths in the U.S. annually, and one out of every 250 Americans is a carrier of the virus. A high percentage of people infected with one of the hepatitis viruses are not aware they are infected. The prevalence of the various hepatitis virus infections is so widespread that it is almost certain that many homecare patients are infected and are unaware of the infection. Therefore, home health aides are caring for infected patients without being aware of the infections. Additionally, there are major differences among the various hepatitis viruses, their mode of transmission, and the severity of the illnesses they cause. The purpose of this in-service is to provide information about the various hepatitis viruses and how home health aides can protect themselves from infection.
